Would you and your family be protected if any of these unexpected events happened?

- A faulty cell phone battery starts a fire that seriously damages your home. Are you covered for the expense of returning the home to its pre-fire condition? What about for living expenses in your area while the repairs are being done so your children can attend their school?
- Your teenage daughter posted a selfie online and now fears she is being stalked. What do you do?
- The bracelet you bought your wife 20 years ago for $5,000 is now worth $20,000. Does your insurance cover its replacement value?
- You're on the vacation of a lifetime in Nepal and suffer a compound leg fracture while hiking. How will you get home?

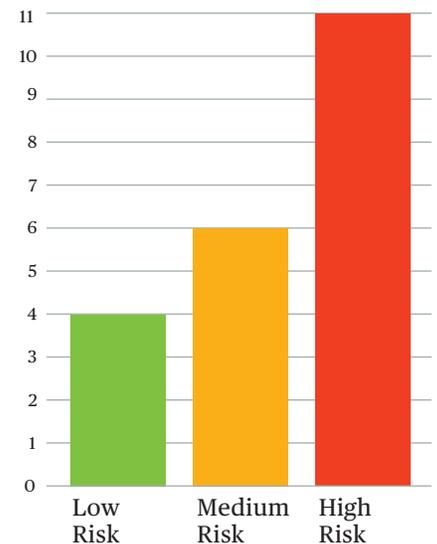

“I’m protected.” What does that mean for you?

At Chubb, we’re always looking for ways to do more for our clients. That means helping you understand the full picture of how you’re protected today. With our new Protection Outlook, get a snapshot of how well you’re already doing and where you can take simple steps to protect yourself even further. So you have the confidence that comes with having comprehensive protection that’s right for you.

For every “A” response you circled, give yourself 1 point. If you scored 4 or more points, there is a good chance that the risks you and your family currently face may exceed the protections of your insurance coverage. If that’s the case, discuss the score with your advisor, who can arrange for a more in-depth analysis of your risk profile.

In today’s complex world, having the right coverage and protection is more important than ever.
